(I'm in your walls)

-An allegory to the removal of consent to the point of taking away one's agency. My God.

-Shots throughout the movie were PHENOMENAL. The scene @ the beginning where you see Bear's reflection @ the crystal shop let me know I was in for a treat. The way you could only see Nikki's silhouette was extremely creepy, esp. w/ the scene where only her eyes were lit.

-The score was SO GOOD. So many scenes where warm beautiful music was playing while the worst insane shit was happening really threw my head in a loop.

-Terrifying & downright reprehensible to see that Bear, even after understanding he's taken away Nikki's agency, is still so adamant about continuing the charade. What a sick & twisted man.

-The scene where Bear calls the support line, & the guy asks if he wants to speak w/ Nikki & it's just her screams of terror was BOMB, OBVIOUSLY.

-The way Sarah & Ian both are opposites in thinking Bear is taking advantage of Nikki / Nikki is taking advantage of Bear is SO interesting. esp knowing that in both cases, we see in the scenes prior that they are both

-Inde Navarrette fucking KILLS IT. Get ready to see her in just about everything, b/c her performance here was some of the best I've ever seen.

Jayden o.o.

-On this go around, the comb design really stuck out. The heat of the scenes, emotions, & what's going on onscreen is all held together by the sand.

-This time around, I noticed the difference in the way when Bear retrieves the witch vs when Ian / Nikki do it.

-I also noticed that when Nikki is killing Sarah, you can hear the car horn going off repeatedly.

-I noticed that when Bear is dying in Nikki's arms, you can see her holding as she's sobbing, as if the real Nikki knows that it's going to be finally over. Shoutout Haley for noticing this & pointing it out for me to spot.

-Inde Navarrette's physical movements & facial expressions REALLY nail it. Her movements are extremely freaky, & her face when she's sobbing after she can't sleep was TERRIFYING.

-Jayden pointed this out - A chance for Nikki to even reject Bear is taken away w/ Bear's refusal to tell the truth - Something he refuses to do until Sarah gets killed.

THIS is the first place where Bear takes away her agency.

-This might be one of the best written movies I have seen period. So much thought & purpose to every scene, down to EVERYTHING.
